Governor Mike and First Lady Jane Sullivan

Greetings and Welcome to Wyoming!

On behalf of the people of Wyoming, let me extend a warm welcome to the Cowboy State. Whether you're just passing through or coming to stay, we're happy to host you.

Wyoming is a state of firsts: the first national park (Yellowstone), first national monument (Devils Tower), first national forest (Shoshone), first woman governor (Nellie Ross) and first government to grant female suffrage (1869). As well, we consider our state to be first in livability, with friendly people, clean air and water, magnificent vistas, lots of open spaces, and few of the problems of metropolitan areas, such as pollution and congestion.

Use this map to guide you from town to town and from natural wonder to natural wonder, referring to it for information about national parks and monuments, state parks and historic sites, annual events and more. Because there's much more to Wyoming than what can be presented in the limited space available on this map, I encourage you to check locally for additional information.

Whether you are traveling our highways on business or pleasure, take time to appreciate our beautiful scenery and our relaxed lifestyle, and don't forget to check out our business climate as well. I urge everyone, visitors and residents alike, to drive with care and to wear safety belts at all times. Also, don't forget that "Wyoming's view is up to you," so please refrain from littering.

Mike Sullivan, Governor
